Job Title: Software Engineer

Job Duties: Design, develop, integrate, and test User interfaces. Write, modify, debug, and test different codes using UI technologies in the process of developing mobile applications.

Troubleshoot various defects, fix application bugs, and improve user experience by performing code reviews adhering to best practices of UI and coding standards. Develop reliable, performant, scalable systems and design robust APIs and primitives. Design architecture and opinionated APIs. Build reliant, performant, and scalable systems for storage, auth, or asset serving to enable other product teams to build robust applications without deep domain expertise in the underlying systems. Design and build UIs on any server platform in a team environment. Work closely with business analysts and the backend team to understand the requirements to ensure that the right set of UI modules is used to build. Engage in the requirement specification process for new software functionality. Ensure adherence to the standard SDLC Processes. Evaluate the projects and architecture and identify opportunities for broadening the scope of the solution and documentation. Utilize in-depth knowledge of technological alternatives and business system requirements to recommend. Create innovations that enhance and provide a competitive advantage to the organization. Perform system design and specification development, program logic and flow-charting, testing, debugging, and documentation. Work with Enterprise teams to ensure changes are appropriately documented, communicated, audited, and deployed in compliance with established procedures. Develop overall concepts for improving the user experience within a business webpage or product, ensuring all interactions are intuitive and convenient for customers. Perform product design tasks of moderate to high complexity which require research and analysis. Automate the deployment, management, and operations of complex distributed systems.
